Child Protection and Your School

Information for parents and young people

"Safeguarding is everybody's business"

Children and young people have a fundamental right to be protected from harm.

Families have a right to expect schools to provide a safe and secure environment.

All schools have a legal duty to work with other agencies, for example Social Care and the Police, to safeguard children's welfare.

This leaflet will explain to you what that means in practice. It also tells you where you can get more information or help.

Your academy has a senior member of staff who is responsible for child protection matters affecting pupils at the academy (the 'Designated Safeguarding Lead').

It also has procedures which explain how your school deals with child protection concerns, plus other safeguarding policies including how to manage allegations against staff and also a staff code of conduct.

You can ask for copies of these documents from the academy office.

Academies must follow:

- The law and guidance from the Department for Education
- The Southend, Essex and Thurrock Safeguarding and Child Protection Procedures
- Their own safeguarding policies

If the academy is worried about whether a pupil is suffering harm, they must refer this on to a social worker.

The academy will normally let the pupil's parent(s) or carer(s) know when they refer but they should not contact parents if they think, or are not sure, that this could put a child or any other person at increased risk of harm. They will usually take advice from social workers about when to speak to parents.

When an academy refers a child protection concern to a social worker, they must share all relevant information about the pupil. The Data Protection Act allows schools to share personal information with other agencies when there are child protection concerns about a child or young person

What happens if a social worker is involved?

The social work manager, usually in consultation with other agencies, will decide what should happen next.

They may decide that no further action is needed by them but suggest that the school or other agencies do an assessment using the Common Assessment Framework or provide services to support the child.

They may decide that the referral needs looking into further. What action is taken will depend on the circumstances. One of the following may be appropriate:

- An assessment.
- Child protection enquiries. These include assessing the risks to the child, based upon research, information shared and talking to those concerned.

If there is an allegation about harm to a child by a member of academy staff a discussion will take place between the academy (usually the Headteacher) and the local authority to decide what should happen next. In some cases this might mean action by social workers and/or the police.

If you do not think the school has properly responded to an allegation about harm to a child by a member of staff you can complain to governors or refer to Social Care or Safeguarding Standards Team.
